Overview

Emily Serdynski joined Cohen and Cleary in September 2026 as an associate, where her practice focuses on estate and trust litigation. Prior to joining Cohen Cleary, P.C., Emily was a law clerk/associate at a Rhode Island law firm where she gained experience in DUI and criminal defense.

While attending Roger Williams University School of Law, Emily served as a legal extern with the Rhode Island School of Design's Office of General Counsel, where she assisted with contractual agreements and regulatory compliance. She also participated in the Roger Williams Unvierstiy School of Law Business Start-Up Clinic, providing transactional legal support to small businesses and nonprofit organizations. Emily was also involved with the Volunteer Income Tax Assistance Program, where she assisted clients with their tax returns, and she was a student leader, helping train program volunteers.

Emily earned her bachelor's degree at the University of Massachusetts Dartmouth, where she majored in English with a concentration in Writing, Rhetoric, and Communication. Emily earned her Juris Doctorate from Roger Willaims University School of Law in May of 2025 and passed the Massachusetts Bar Examination in November 2025.
