Overview

Renee Dangoia joined the firm in 2025 and is committed to advocating for and serving individuals throughout Massachusetts, where she was born, raised, and is now raising a family of her own.

Renee brings real-world balance, resilience, and empathy to her legal practice. As a working parent who successfully balanced raising a family while working and completing law school, Attorney Dangoia understands firsthand what it takes to prioritize what matters most. She carries that same mindset into her work with clients—approaching every case with organization, clarity, and a deep respect for the challenges individuals and families face while navigating the legal system.

During law school, Renee worked as a legal assistant/paralegal for a law office in Plymouth, specializing in criminal and family law matters. She obtained invaluable experience managing a wide range of cases in those practice areas.

While working as a legal assistant/paralegal, Renee additionally worked as a student attorney in the clinical law office of New England Law Boston where she represented clients in housing court matters.

Following graduation Renee worked as a law clerk for a law office in Plymouth. She worked on various matters in the areas of family law, estate litigation, employment law, and zoning law. This experience allowed Renee to develop a strong foundation across multiple areas of law.

Renee then worked for a business law firm, utilizing her business management degree and law degree as an office manager and litigation and real estate paralegal. She handled the functioning of the office while simultaneously assisting and supporting attorneys through all stages of complex civil litigation matters and ensuring seamless real estate transactions.

Across all practice areas, Renee's background in juggling demanding responsibilities has shaped
